JAM School Program suggestions for summer: A recent survey shows kids are less active, have inconsistent sleep patterns and overeat during the "lazy" days of summer....all of which cause weight gain. And this weight gain contributes to health risks. National experts encourage parents to shop for and cook healthy meals together, take long family walks after dinner, look for programs that can provide daily routines for children, give kids chores or responsibilities around the house, encourage kids to plan neighborhood activities such as kickball or hide-and-go-seek, help kids start a garden, and limit sweets! The week before school resumes, get kids back on the school clock so they aren't struggling with the adjustment and to assist teachers in a smoother jumpstart to the school year.
